Willie was a duck with wings so small,
Whatever he tried he couldn't fly at all.

He was so bored of the life on the pond,
So he took a dive in the deep sea beyond.

And deep underwater a map he did find,
Inspiring Willie for an adventurous stride.

Back on the surface he started to pack,
Things he could fit in his tiny, red bag.

As he went to tell his friends Goodbye,
They got really sad, even started to cry.

Still there was much left unobserved,
So Willie started to waddle the world.

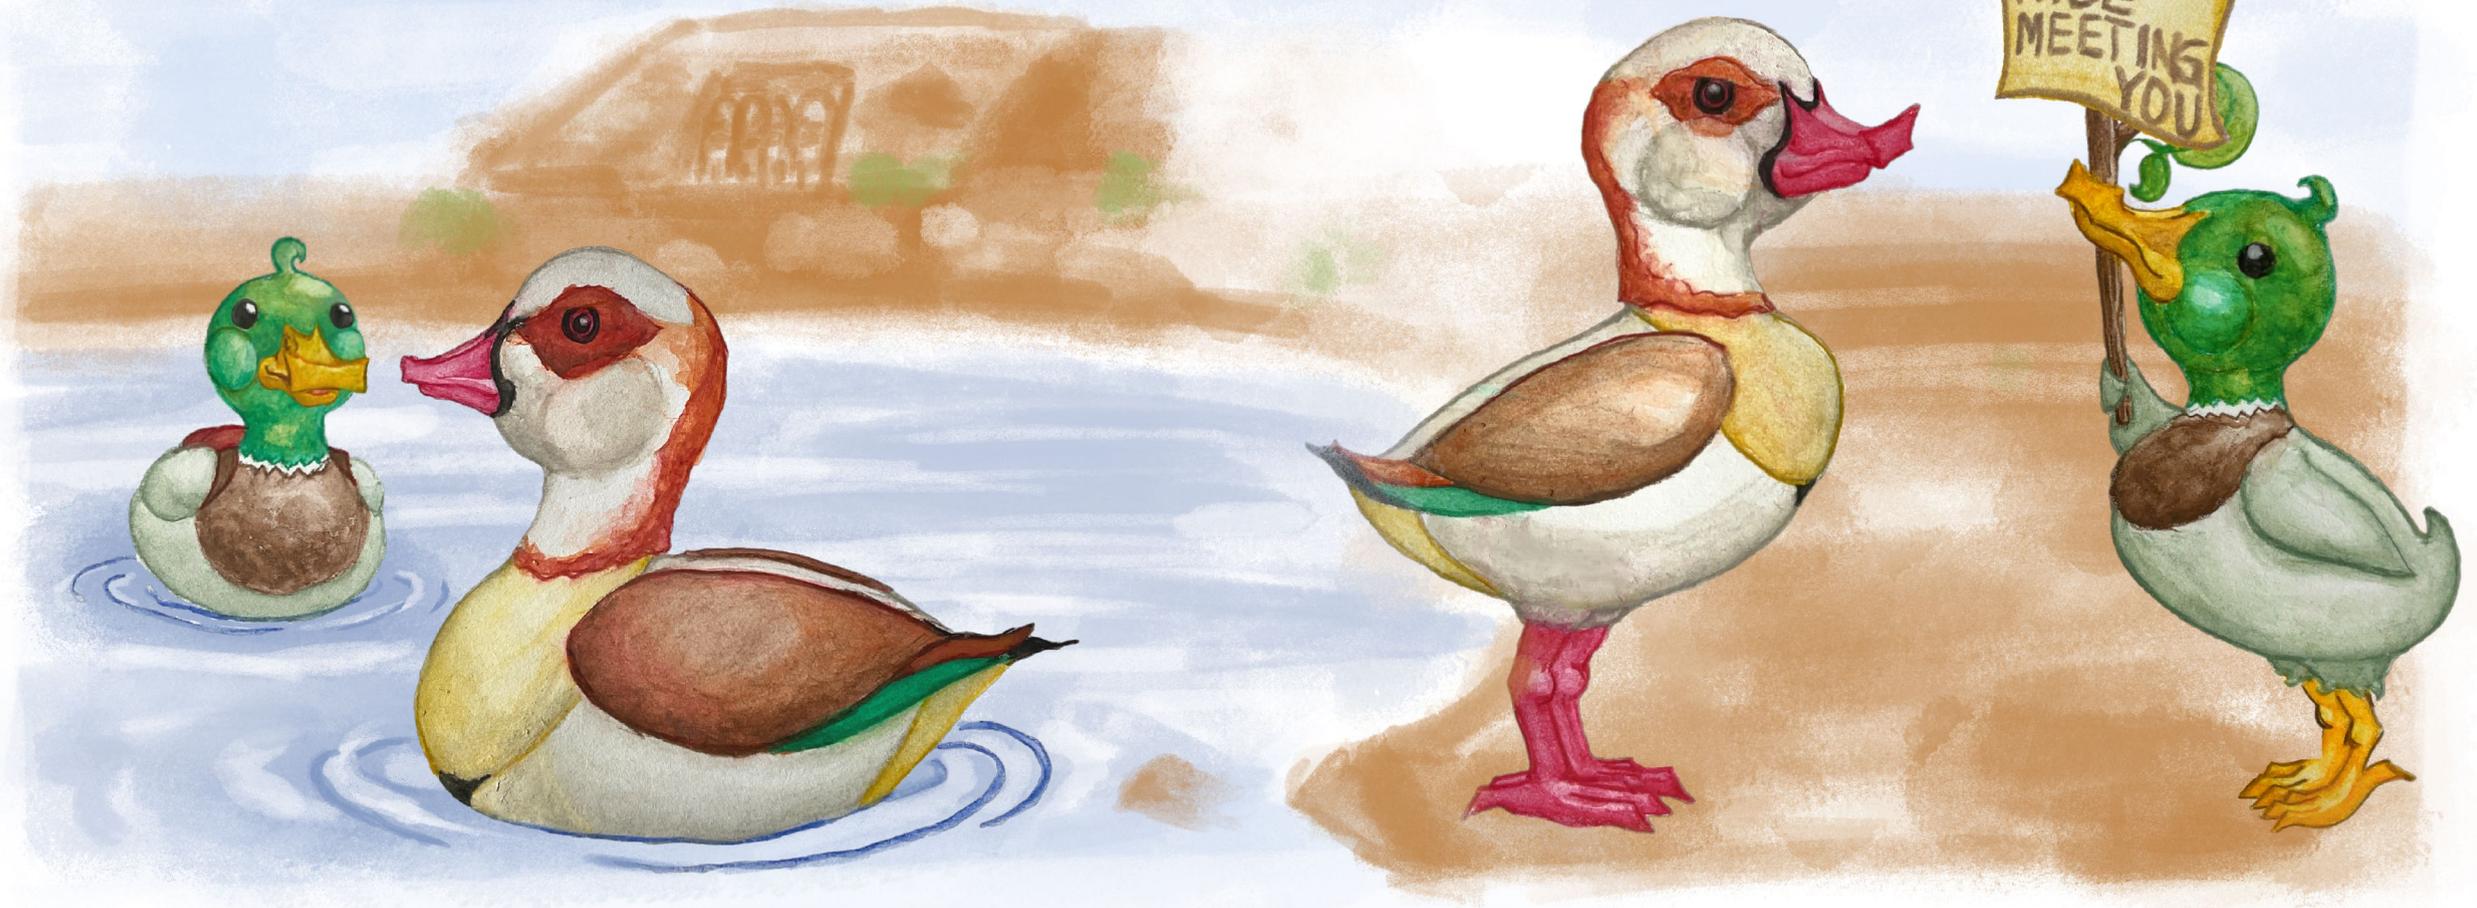

East of the map Willie finally had luck,
It was where he met a mandarin duck.

He had sail-like wings and an elegant crest,
Willie was stunned by his manner of dress.

Willie waddled on and as the air went dry,
He met a duck that was in disguise.

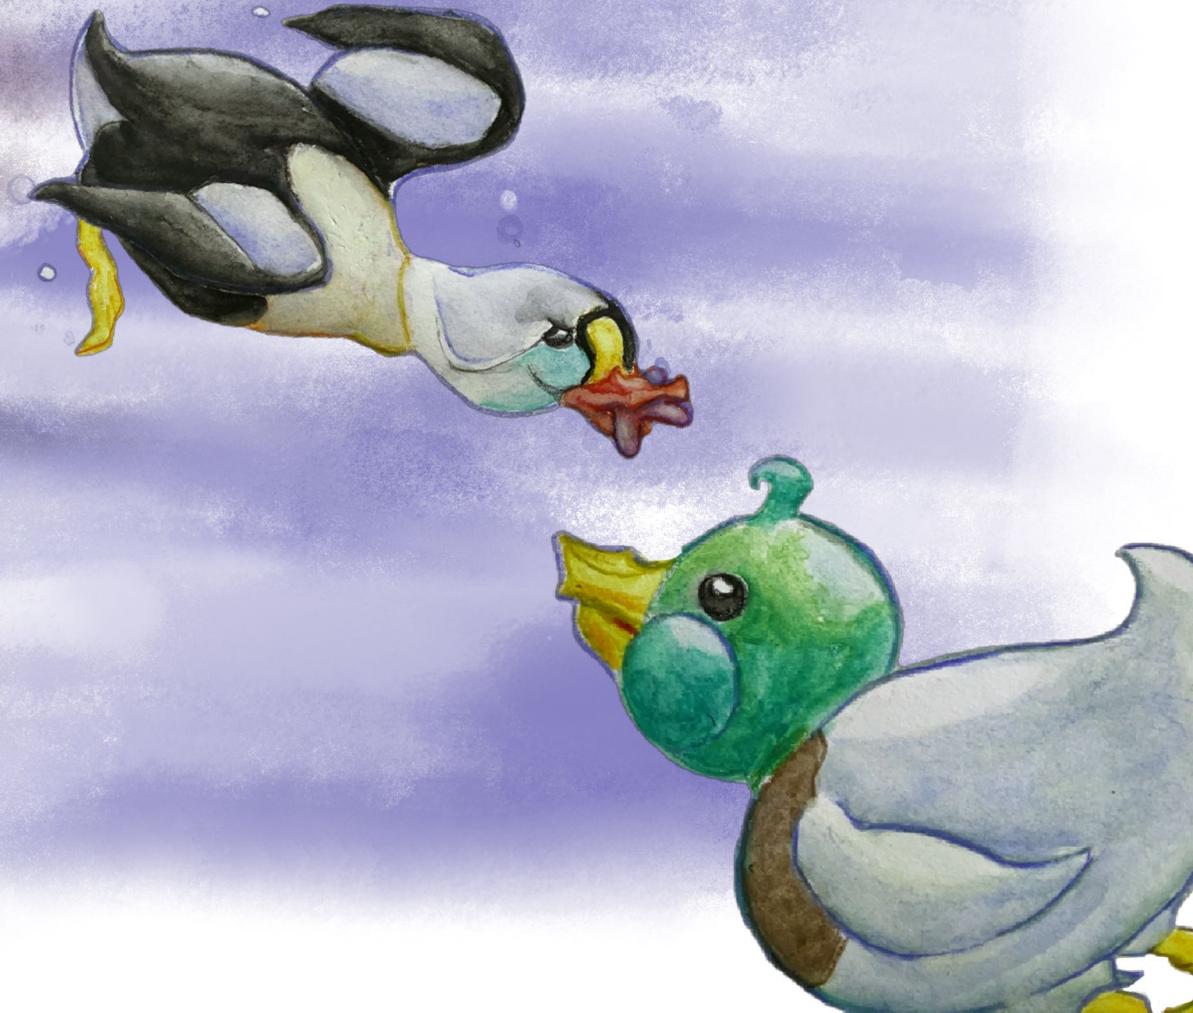

The Egyptian Goose doubled Willie in size,
Her legs so long, they reached the sky.

At last the old map had taken him north,
To a King Eider Duck, sharing his warmth.

Deep underwater the Eider would hunt,
Taught Willie to do quite incredible stunts.

Willie had had waddled so far and so long,
But now it was time he returned to his pond.

Back with his friends, the pond was alive,
They welcome the boy with joy and a hive.

Willie was happy to share what he learned
Taught by the various friends he had earned

As Willie had traveled he came to find,
Talking to others had opened his mind.

To things that he never knew of before,
His various friends had opened a door.
He treasured the thought of going away,
And meeting them again some day.
